Interdimensional Cloak wavers, The Ninth Heaven, drop music video in portal opening ritual

On October 28th, in conjunction with an ancient Roman–Hellenistic Isis cult ritual, The Ninth Heaven, a band from an alternate reality in the 1980s, will attempt to posthumously penetrate this dimension via the portal of YouTube.

The Ninth Heaven do not exist in this dimension. After their final public performance at Loch Ness in 1983, in which band leader Enrique Abu (allegedly) sacrificed a herd of black swans live onstage, lost tapes began to surface. Czar Lipstick, a time traveler and the band’s self-appointed manager, has been systematically releasing these posthumous recordings via unknown methods through a helper called The Medium.

This video release, according to communications, marks the initiation of a cosmic energy shift as prophesied in an obscure young adult ‘fantasy’ novel, Jurate’s Castle, published in 2012.

Engage with this video and join the ritual.
